To Miss Weston «Caroline Weston?»

«Leicester, (Mass.)» A Board meeting has been decided upon. The writer suggests that if the addressee cannot be present, she send a written authority to E. Quincy to vote for her. The writer also advised E. Quincy to write to Mrs. M. W. Chapman in New York "for her proxy." Presents the questions to be put before the Board. The third question if whether Garrison is to be asked to give an address at the Annual Meeting. He seemed inclined to do so, and it seems right that he should as "the large majority, doubtless, will then wish to hear his views, at close of his anti-slavery life proper."
A.L.S. 3 p. 8 x 5 in.

A postscript states: "Thi[illegible] a day of the severest cold for two years here. Mercury now 10 P.M. 18 below zero."

To Richard Davis Webb

[Leicester, Mass.] The writer speaks at length of the tragic consequences of Samuel J. May's death. Philosophizes about the Hereafter. Says that most of Fitch's obituary of S. J. M. had been written before his death. The writer says he forgot to put extra postage on his letters to Europe. Says he has always admired Harriet Martineau and discusses her character and career. Would like her help with the Memoir of S. J. M. Thinks the Memoir should be brief. Rev. T. J. Mumford is to edit it. Says that Mrs. Bertody has been ill, old Mr. Emerson reached the age of 100 years, and that his father was 93 years 3 months and 19 days old when he died. Is surprized at the British fondness for Walt W[illegible]n and Bret Harte's sudden rise to popularity. Mentions al[illegible]hn Hay and Joaquin Miller. Describes a 4th of July celebration. Mentions Irish troubles and Woman Suffrage.

To Rev. James Freeman Clarke No.62

[Leicester, Mass.] The writer asks Rev. Clarke if he has read the biography of Garrison by his children. Discusses G.'s similarity to Peter the Hermit. Thinks Garrison's great virtue was his avoidance of compromise. Believes Slavery would have continued to grow if the Garrisonian Abolitionists hadn't stopped it. Discusses Dr. Channing's claim to the leadership of the Anti-Slavery movement. Says the Unitarian writers have ignored the biography of Garrison.

«Leominster, Mass.» Sends a few articles for the fair. Characterizes the abolitionists in the town: some are for political action, a few are for moral suasion, "some are for mute suasion," that is "expediency." Mentions as outstanding in active zeal and generosity Mrs. L.L. Walker and Mr. Isaac Smith, who finances the lecturers. Two years ago, at the suggestion of Abby Kelley, an A.S. Sewing Society was formed, which worked for the American A.S.Society. Soon, however, they were called upon to change their constitution in the interest of New Organization, whereupon the writer withdrew, preferring to work "singly and alone, for the old school."

«Leominster (Mass.)» The addressee's instructive letter was read to the writer's little society. The writer quotes remarks of sceptics who wonder what "those few women think they can do to abolish slavery." Complains at length about the negative attitude of "our clergy & our physicians & the most influential among our church members." The writer was able to collect for the Western (A.S.) Mission no more than $2.25 from persons of standing and property. The Unitarian minister said he could not "consistently do anything for the Mass. society so long as they send out such men as Collins and Remond." The Unitarian church in this t[illegible]n is by far the most popular;

The writer withdrew from the Leominster female Anti-Slavery Society because of its sectarian and new organizational character. Having called a meeting at her house for those disposed to aid the Mass.A.S. fair, the writer requests the addressee to send an appeal to the ladies of Leominster to be read at the occasion. The people "will not hear the Church, the Clergy, etc.etc. denounc'd thinking it foreign from the subject which they wish to hear advocated." The Anti-Slavery Society has been dissolved. Her time has all been taken up recently "in the Texas warfare," circulating the Petition, walking from house to house, battling "the stupid Whigs, & the wicked Democrats." One old Federalist told the writer that women could not know anything about politics but what the men told them. The writer obtained over 300 names, mostly of women; if she had circulated the petition among men, she would have had twice the number of signatures. The writer is testing the anti-slavery zeal of the local Unitarians by sending material for work to their sewing circle. The writer, having to retrench, has limited her personal expenses, except for board, to six dollars a year; but will not give up the Liberator as long as she can live on two meals a day. «Lexington, Mass.» Encloses the Hancock seal as the writer's contribution to the fair, hoping it will bring 50 or 100 dollars. It belonged to the first Republican Governor of Massachusetts, and was for several years worn by the writer's father. It is the writer's wish that the proceeds should be applied directly to the payment of Mrs. Lydia Maria Child's salary or to Mrs. Child's and Mr. Garrison's in equal portions.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

‹Lexington, Mass.› The writer will be happy to be one of a number who will give a course of Anti-Slavery lectures at Amory Hall, but he will not be able to meet them at the addressee's house at the time proposed. While the writer finds his present duties all that he can discharge "decently well," he is jealous of his place among the old-school Abolitionists. Inquires about Garrison's illness.

A.L.S. 3 p. 10 x 8 in.

In a postscript, the writer reminds the addressee that the proceeds from the sale of his seal are to be divided between Garrison and Mrs. Lydia Mari[illegible]ld. If it did not sell, the writer will take it back and [illegible]te ten dollars instead. For an account of the seal, see Vol.17, No.144.

To Hon. Horace Mann

[Lexington] The writer seeks to allay Mr. Mann's fears that zeal for the cause of Abolition will cause him(Rev. May) to neglect his duties toward the Normal School. He adds that many of the pupils of the Normal School are Abolitionists, and that his trip to Waltham with some of them did not result in neglect of his duties. He also said that he had abandoned the idea of giving a course of lectures on Abolition. He ends the letter by saying that the Normal School is full and that some of the students want to study Latin.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

«Lowell (Mass.)» Concerned with a proposed fair to be held in Lowell. The writer regrets that she has little influence among the (working) girls. Because "these are hard times and their wages are reduced," they seem to blame those who "have appeared in their behalf before the public, and neglected the one great interest — their wages." Makes suggestions as to halls where the fair might be held. The writer does not anticipate "any signal success." Lowell people are poor as compared with those of Boston, and "they are somewhat sensitive with regard to a second hand fair." Neither do they see the connection between slave an[illegible]e labor.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman No.10

‹Lunenburg, Mass.› The writer seeks advice in respect to anti-slavery work. Lunenburg is one of the most backward towns in the county. At an anti-slavery convention held June last, only six citizens were present, besides the writer's family. Only a year ago, the writer was herself willfully ignorant and prejudiced against abolitionists or Garrison, but the first anti-slavery lecture she heard convinced her of the truth. The writer has little confidence in her own ability to go forward, and does not sympathize with unchristian denunciations. Since the writer has become an abolitionist, "the Bible is a new book" to her. Asks the addressee to send various anti-slavery publications.

To Maria (Weston) Chapman

«Lynn, Mass.» Peace has lately claimed much of writer's attention because A-S cause was getting into hands of politicians; sees difficulties in way of Peace.
A.L.S. 4 p. 8 x 5 in.

In postscript, writer praises addressee's Report to Boston Female Anti-Slavery Society, explains that she is sending Lydia G. Keene to attend Fair in her stead.

To Henry Grafton Chapman No.106

‹Lynn, Mass.› The writer, having looked over a list of debtors to the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society published in the Liberator, found that the addressee had put down the Lynn Young Men's Anti-Slavery Society as being $150 in debt. Explains that this is a mistake, as the Lynn society has paid $100 to the American Anti-Slavery Society's agents "as part pay of the pledge of our State Society to theirs."

«Lynn, Mass.» The writer maintains that she can moralize and philosophize, but is not good at describing. Mentions "$500 net proceeds" (at the Lynn Anti-Slavery Fair). The writer regrets "these internal divisions." Admitting that "lies are to be extinguished," the writer advocates a spirit of gentleness. "If our peace principles are good for anything they are good for everything."

A.L.S. 4 p. 8 7/8 x 7 1/2 in.

Written at top of first page, apparently by the addressee: "An answer to my request tha[illegible]he would describe the Lynn Fair at which we assisted f[illegible]e Liberator. This was the beginning of the 'division.[illegible] would not work for the Boston Fair that year, it being in the hands of the enemy."

«Lynn, Mass.» The writer regrets that "the conversation at our house should have left unlovely impressions" on the addressee's mind. The writer "has ever felt the deepest sympathy for Emerson and Alcott." Basing her own notions on St. John's Gospel, the writer takes a critical attitude toward St. Paul. Exhorting the addressee not to identify "spiritualism" with materialism, the writer sets forth her idea of innocence and divine immanence. Explains also the thesis: "My Faith is the stronghold of my Abolitionism."

him. "... Prejudice against color exists among Friends in this country ..." The opposition to W. B.'s Abolitionism is growing. Only "those who are called to the work of the ministry could deliver public discourses" on Abolitionism, Temperance, etc. Friends have objected to opening Anti-Slavery meetings with prayer. Tells about the argument over the annexation of Texas. No Anti-Slavery material has been published in the Friend. At meetings, colored Friends sit apart by themselves, and white Friends are not supposed to sit with them. J. J. Gurney is opposed to the Abolitionists. Compares the status of Aboliti[illegible]sts in England and America. Prof. M. Stuart supports [illegible] Gurney's anti-Abolitionist stand. Was astonished at the hostile attitude of Eliz. .Lynn, (Mass.). Hopes that the British Abolitionists will work vigorously to end oppression in British India. Will try to persuade W. L. Garrison to give this reform more attention in the Liberator. The American Abolitionists are engaged in a struggle with the churches, who have "assumed the right to control the consciences" of their members. The Society of Friends is siding with the churches, for which conduct W. B. criticises it severely. Condemns the clerical argument that a Christian should suffer rather than labor at the present time, and that the Quakers should render "unconditional obedience to the decrees of th[illegible]ciety." Thinks that the energies of the Society are be[illegible]employed in England. Tells of «Camp Ly(n)field, Mass.» Requests the addressee to secure a certificate from Mr. Humphry, the selectman of "my town" (Weymouth), so that the writer can have a furlough of a few days. "I am content still I would be more content if I had bid you all - my Wife & Child good bye.- We are here all in our Battery old Soldiers." If any of the Weston family should come to the camp, the writer would make it as comfortable as he could. Sends a message to Almira (his wife) and "kiss my little darling for me." It will take a month to get through all the manoeuvres which they have to learn in the Artillery Service.

"Poor Whittier was compelled to receive a tithe of the vengeance accumulated for me." Disagrees with the Boston Gazette that the press is mainly opposed to the Abolitionists. The N.Y. Evening Post, N.Y. Sun and others are Anti-Slavery. The Boston Courier is undecided which way to turn. Its editor, J. T. Buckingham, "evidently cares little for the South." A Southern newspaper hints that the slaveholders may resort to assassination. G. T. commends W.L.G.'s course. A stro[illegible]pponent of G. «Middleborough, Mass.» The writer has been able to collect next to nothing. There is little true anti-slavery spirit in the town. The wealthy and influential are generally opposed to it, and the claims of charities and the support of religious institutions make it hard to collect for the slave. The writer thinks that an efficient lecturer might rouse anti-slavery feelings, and hopes that a recently erected chapel will be used for the purpose.

«Milton Hill, Milton, Mass.» The writer says that she would give the addressee $100 instead of the enclosed ten if she could, but that she cannot join her in her public interests. The writer reads and hears little on the subject of Abolition, although she loves "a black face" and "would have all free." But the writer has a distaste for public life, is "a perfect fool about politics," and has "a holy horror of societies." Although she always responds to the writings of Dr. William Ellery Channing, the writer cannot go "hand in hand" with the addressee or Mrs. Eliza Lee Follen or Susan Cabot. The writer mentions a last visit t[illegible]r childhood home in Pearl St., the illness and death of he[illegible]nt Perkins," and other happenings. Comments on the addressee's harmony of interests with her sisters and her husband.»

"Brush Hill (Milton) Mass." The writer is anxious for news in her country solitude. "Our Society" met last night at Dr. Palmer's, who disparaged the mob incident of 1837, and advocated political abolitionism. The writer solicited articles for the fair from every woman present. In a letter to the writer Sophie Bradford said that she never wished to hear Mr. Winslow again because, on his return from the South, he, in a vestry meeting, praised the Southerners and told of finding the slaves much better treated than he expected, several saying that they would not accept freedom.
